‘My Southern Love’ is a play written to shed some light on the evil acts of xenophobic attacks currently suffered by foreigners especially Nigerians, in South Africa.

This comes as a huge shock to Nigerians especially owing to the fact that Nigerians have shown South Africans nothing but love and support and was part of a host of many nations that kicked terribly against the apartheid regime suffered by the blacks in South Africa. Nigeria played a huge role in their walk to freedom through their relentless support.

This book is written with the intention to change the mindset of hatred and lack of reception towards foreigners especially Nigerians in South Africa.
