Symptoms such as fatigue, shortness of breath, and dizziness plagued her daily life. Yet, despite the constant battles, her spirit remained unbroken.

It wasn't until years later, after countless misdiagnoses and frustrations, that Lene finally received a life-altering diagnosis. At the age of 30, she was diagnosed with a congenital heart defect known as "coronary artery anomaly." This condition, a rare and potentially fatal abnormality in the blood vessels supplying the heart, explained the physical limitations she had faced throughout her life.
