Begin your journey at The Marquee Club, where the British blues scene exploded in the 1960s with bands like The Yardbirds and The Rolling Stones. Imagine yourself alongside Mick Jagger belting out "Satisfaction" on the stage that witnessed the birth of rock and roll.

Continue your adventure to Denmark Street, often referred to as London's Tin Pan Alley. This hub of music publishers, studios, and instrument shops has served as a creative hub and a launchpad for countless rock icons. Feel the vibe of this historical street as you stroll past the facades that witnessed the dreams and ambitions of budding rockstars.

Legendary Venues that Echo with Rock History

No rock and roll tour would be complete without visiting the legendary music venues that have shaped London's music scene. Rock out at the iconic KOKO, formerly known as The Camden Palace, where artists like The Clash, Prince, and Madonna have left an indelible mark with their unforgettable performances.

Continue your journey to The Roundhouse, an iconic venue that has hosted legendary acts such as The Doors, Jimi Hendrix, and Pink Floyd. Step inside this historic building and feel the energy that still lingers from those iconic performances that took place decades ago.

Immerse Yourself in Rock History

The London Rock Walking Tour is not just about visiting landmarks and venues; it's also about diving deep into the stories and anecdotes that make rock history come alive. Your knowledgeable guide will share fascinating tales of wild parties, unexpected collaborations, and the rise and fall of rock legends.

A walking tour that shows you where the Beatles recorded Let it Be and gave their last live performance on the roof top, where Paul met Linda, where David Bowie recorded world famous albums, where the Rolling Stones performed, rehearsed and recorded. You will also see where Jimi Hendrix gave his last performance, where John Lennon first wore those glasses, where Elton John worked as an office boy, where someone turned down the chance to publish some of Paul Simon's most famous songs, where the Sex Pistols lived and where the Who's brilliant drummer Keith Moon is remembered. No where in the world does a square mile of streets have so many famous rock stories. Whether you are interested in The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, David Bowie, Jimi Hendrix, Pink Floyd, The Kinks, The Small Faces, The Sex Pistols, Elton John, Paul Simon, The Clash, Oasis, Blur - they are all here.
